

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A device is provided having one or more light quantity controlling members that move into, and out of, an opening portion through which light passes and 5 which is formed by at least a portion of inner diameter sides of a first stator and a second stator, thus controlling the amount of light passing therethrough. The one or more light quantity controlling members are disposed between the magnet
10 and the second stator.